A Little About the Blues

Sonny Boy Williamson II, nicknamed "King of the Harmonica" by his peers, was one of the most inspiring harp players in blues history, he has influenced generations of players, including such virtuosos as Howling Wolf, James Cotton and Junior Wells.

Sonny Boy Williamson was, in many ways, the ultimate blues legend. By the time of his death in 1965, he had been around long enough to have played with Robert Johnson at the start of his career and Eric Clapton, Jimmy Page and Robbie Robertson at the end of it. In between, he drank a lot of whiskey, hoboed around the country, had a successful radio show for 15 years, toured Europe to great acclaim and simply wrote, played and sang some of the greatest blues ever etched into black phonograph records. His delivery was sly, evil and world-weary, while his harp-playing was full of short, rhythmic bursts one minute and powerful, impassioned blowing the next. His songs were chock-full of mordant wit.

Though he took his namesake from another well-known harp player, no one really sounded like him. Of his childhood days in Mississippi, absolutely nothing is known. What is known is that by the mid-'30s, he was traveling the Delta working under the alias of Little Boy Blue. With blues legends like Robert Johnson, Robert Nighthawk, Robert Jr. Lockwood, and Elmore James as interchangeable playing partners, he worked the juke joints, fish fries, country suppers and ballgames of the era. By the early '40s, he was the star of KFFA's King Biscuit Time, the first live blues radio show to hit the American airwaves. As one of the major ruses to occur in blues history, his sponsor felt they could push more sacks of their King Biscuit Flour with Miller posing as Chicago harmonica star John Lee "Sonny Boy" Williamson. In today's everybody-knows-everything video age, it's hard to think that such an idea would work, much less prosper. After all, the real Sonny Boy was a national recording star, and Miller's vocal and harmonica style was in no way derivative of him. But Williamson had no desire to tour in the South, so prosper it did, and when John Lee was murdered in Chicago, Miller became -- in his own words -- "the original Sonny Boy." Among his fellow musicians, he was usually still referred to as Rice Miller, but to the rest of the world he did, indeed, become the Sonny Boy Williamson.

Be A Part

Last year on a rainy September day, 200 folks sat in the rain to listen to the Blues. One of the drowning says "Hey why not spread this music out so we don't have to worry so much about the weather".... And Tuesday Blues was born.

That is how things work with the Chippewa Valley Blues Society. Someone comes up with an idea of how we can increase awareness, understanding and appreciation of Blues music. Then CVBlues members work to make it happen. Join the Chippewa Valley Blues Society as a Friend of the Blues. Your involvement and your membership help makes these events occur.

The Blues Society is committed to expand the presence and vitality of the Blues in communities throughout the Chippewa Valley by promoting family venues & events such as this with the support of our local sponsors. Let our sponsors know you appreciate their support of the Community. Stop by our hospitality tent and learn more about what the Chippewa Valley Blues Society is doing in your community.
